THE SENATE ALARMED

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES TAKING A MORE INDEPENDENT POSITION IN THE GOVERNMENT—SENATE DEFIED BY HOUSE UNDER CANNON AND DEPRIVED OF ITS POSITION AS "THE WHOLE THING."

The speaker is a heavy embarrassment to the Senate. His ambition for the speakership was founded on his desire to rescue the House from its subservience to the Senate and restore it to its old place as a co-equal branch of Congress. As soon as he became speaker he undertook to carry out his plan, and, short as the session was, he met with notable success. He met the Senate with a resolute front at the beginning of the session, and from that time on until the close, whenever there was a clash between the two houses it was the Senate which yielded. The most notable occurrences of the kind were when the House forced the Senate to give up its own bill for the government of the Panama canal zone and when the House forced the Senate to accept the former's river and harbor bill.

The Senate was particularly set upon the canal zone bill, and went so far as to threaten to defeat the adjournment of Congress and hold the two houses in session indefinitely. Mr. Cannon would not yield, and the Senate was obliged to back out for it did not care to make good its threat. The river and harbor bill was ever dearer to individual senators, who had loaded the House's little $3,000,000 down with surveys. The House stripped these surveys off in disregard of the feelings of senators, who thought the "pork barrel" was to be opened again, and the Senate, after growling a good deal, surrendered.

These were the most important achievements of the House, but all along the way Mr. Cannon's path was studded with countless little victories over the Senate. The session was too short and business-like and too little was done to give the speaker a chance at the great victory he hopes to achieve, but he already has gone far toward the fulfillment of his purpose.

The Senate is much perturbed over the outlook. It has so long been the American Congress, with the House an unimportant tailpiece, that it does not relish the idea of relinquishing its assumed domination. There are few men in the House of speakership size who could carry out Mr. Cannon's purposes as doggedly and as skillfully as he does, even if they desired to, and the senators think that if he were out of the way the House would sink back into the subordinate place it occupied under Speaker Henderson. Hence the Cannon boom for vice-president. It is needless to say that in that office he would be powerless for harm from the Senate viewpoint. He would preside over the Senate, but the Senate, unlike the House, governs itself, and the presiding officer is simply a figurehead.

This is also the reason why Mr. Cannon so bitterly resents the idea of being taken away from the House. It is commonly said that the speakership has been the goal of his ambition, and this is true, but it was not so much the office he longed for as the chance to carry out his purpose of rescuing the House and making it at least equal with the Senate.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Preacher in England Adopts Original Method of Getting Near the People of His Parish.

The Rev. P. W. Francis, M. A., curate of Christ church, North Finchley, England, has adopted a novel method of securing the confidence and friendship of the men employed in building new villas in his parish.

He mounts the scaffold, and, seizing a trowel, works with the men while he talks to them.

"You can't help liking him," said one of the bricklayers, "for he's a man as well as a parson."

"When a visitor comes on the scaffolding it's the custom to ask him to pay his 'footing'."

"We hardly knew how he would take it, but he only smiled and paid up like a man by 'standing' us tea all round. He doesn't believe in giving us the money to buy alcohol."

"Pick, shovel, and trowel all come the same to him."

Mr. Francis has announced that the members of his Bible class are going to build a drinking fountain near what used to be Finchley common.

"And I am going to help them," he added. "I shall take off my black coat, and help to dig the ground ready for the laying of the water pipe from the main to our drinking fountain."

The action of this practical curate calls to mind the cases of the Stepney priest who cleaned his own church; the Peckham pastor who, with the help of the congregation, painted and decorated his chapel, and the Aston vicar, who personally took part in the voluntary toil of his parishioners to repair their church.

Wilke Refrigerators....

MERIT THE SERIOUS ATTENTION OF EVERY CAREFUL HOUSEWIFE.

The safe, economical and healthful preservation of food is quite as important as the food itself. Fresh, sweet and clean foods should not be submitted to the care of soggy, decaying wood and corroding metal, nor surrounded with dank, dead air; yet that persistent odor in the ordinary refrigerator is proof positive of corruption.

WILKE REFRIGERATORS are lined with either white glazed tile or half-inch plate glass; internal fixtures are all removable. Materials are absolutely non-corrosive, construction is air-tight, and there is a constant circulation of cold, dry air in every cubic inch of the provision chambers.
